I am now converted to this strategy too - the Blackpool route

We should use the full authority of the House to underline the basic message: this is a risk we cannot take. If we put someone on earlier, there is a danger that the big picture will get lost in the detail of precisely how long it takes for nuclear capacity etc. Instead TB can carry the big message: this is a man who will do anything he can not just to hang on to power, but to impose his will.
