

Loftus, Paul (L&DR-LON)

From: David Kelly [REDACTED]
Sent: 27 April 2003 16:56
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: RE: Scientists' Gut Spilling

[REDACTED]

Compiling the "dossier" will be an achievement now that journalists are getting to sources [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] now talking

Regards,

David

-----Original Message-----

From: [REDACTED]mailto:[REDACTED]
Sent: 27 April 2003 15:45
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Scientists' Gut Spilling

David,

For some inexplicable reason I did not receive [REDACTED] Now that I have it, it make's interesting reading. The only [REDACTED] I know off the top of my head is [REDACTED] [REDACTED] it clearly is not him

It is a little disturbing that this information is leaking out in this arbitrary and piecemeal fashion. I hope someone is getting chapter and verse reporting direct from theatre. Do you see the stuff if it is not an indelicate question? At the very least some of former colleagues should be dissecting and analysing everything in preparation for what we may be called to do. We should go armed with a digest (better not call it a 'dossier') of the new information indicating changes to the Iraqi line on the programme. It would be a valuable starting point

Regards

[REDACTED]

In a message dated 27 Apr 2003 10:32:19 GMT Daylight Time, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

Thanks. Did you notice in [REDACTED] that 3 of the top 25 scientists have spoken to journalists - [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] hope that there is a systematic approach to collecting such information.

Regards,

David

COM/4/0130