we should certainly get them to interview Giligan and source, and best if you give evidence after both of them

I have not gone back to them yet - we could offer them 8 30 to 9 45 on 17 July

I'm wondering whether in the light of yesterday's developments, there is not a case for me doing more with the ISC than the half hour with a limited focus on intelligence handling. If the BBC source situation develops as it might, surely it is in our interest for the ISC to delve deeply into this, by interviewing the source, and Giligan and myself, and for us all putting over our concerns about the damage this could do to the integrity of the intelligence services
