Dear John,

GILLIGAN ACCUSATIONS: DR DAVID KELLY

You asked for a short note on Dr Kelly's views of the Iraqi WMD programme and the Government's dossier, published last September. What follows reflects points made by David Kelly in his letter in which he admitted to his meeting with Gilligan on 22 May, and from interviews conducted with him by MOD

U
15/7.

According to Dr Kelly, based on his extensive and authoritative knowledge of Iraq's WMD programme, notably it's biological programme, he believes that the September dossier was a fair reflection of open source information and appreciations about Iraq's WMD programme. He claims that he has never attempted to undermine Government policy as he was personally sympathetic to the war because he recognised from a decade's work the menace of Iraq's ability to further develop a non-conventional weapons programme. He feels no unease over the dossier because it is completely coincident with his personal views on Iraq's unconventional weapons capability

On the 45 minute deployment issue, Kelly says that his standard view is that he does not know the intelligence and is not familiar with an Iraqi weapons system that matches that sort of timescale
