Loftus, Paul (L&DR-LON)

From: David Kelly [redacted]
Sent: 04 June 2003 14:32
To: Gary Samore
Subject: RE Wot - no chemical weapons?

Gary,

I wish that they had been stumbled on but by all accounts it would require to be a stumble! The fact that few are coming forward to provide much information about anything at all is of concern

I hope to be Baghdad this weekend on a purely administrative visit - it will be the first time in over four years

All the best,

David

-----Original Message-----
From: Gary Samore [redacted]
Sent: 04 June 2003 12:19
To: David Kelly
Cc: Kristina Zetterlund
Subject: RE: Wot - no chemical weapons?

David,

Well, maybe I'm being premature, but I figure that we should have stumbled over a few hundred tons of agent and thousands of empty munitions by now, if they were deployed in the field Even if the Iraqi collapse was too quick for Iraq to move CW out of hiding places and into the field, don't you think some Iraqi officer would have come forward by now to lead us to hidden CW caches, in exchange for reward money?

Look forward to getting together soon

Gary

Dr. Gary Samore
Director of Studies
[redacted]

-----Original Message-----
From: David Kelly [mailto[redacted]
Sent: 04 June 2003 11:09
To: Gary Samore
Cc: Kristina Zetterlund

COM14/0105

28/08/2003